TAKIN' ME DOWN

For fans of Phantogram, Goldfrapp and St. Vincent

On the heels of their cover of the xx's "Shelter", indie electronic pop band Sutro, releases their new single, "Takin' Me Down". Lead singer, Tyler Stone, delivers sultry vocals with attitude while the band's signature DJ meets live musicianship sound gets amped up with overdriven guitar and warbling synths. The song is about a power play between two people, but ultimately when Stone proclaims, "you think you're in control but all I have to do is call!" the outcome is clear. The song's gradual build from dark and sexy to fierce and driving, takes the listener along for an emotional ride, while delivering a powerful and catchy chorus.

Sutro is a Portland & San Francisco based indie electronic band that blends a fresh take on live musicianship and DJ sensibility. Their most recent LP "Broken Distance", was co-produced with Grammy award winning producer Joe Chiccarelli and spent 8 weeks on iTunes top selling alternative album chart. Their songs have regular rotation on radio stations including KNRK, XRAYFM, Portland Radio Project, and SOMA FM. They have performed as support for acts including, Little Dragon, Thievery Corporation, Tuxedo, and Nuspirit Helsinki, and host an ongoing boutique performance series in their studio called View from the Basement.
